

Zhen-Hui Eng

Zhen-Hui joins us as a manager from Singapore's Energy Market Authority (EMA), where he last held the position as Director of Policy. Prior to EMA, he held various positions in Singapore's public service as part of a management trainee programme. Zhen-Hui holds a 'Diplom-Ingenieur' degree (Master's in Engineering) from the Technische Universität München. He is fluent in English, Mandarin and German.

Whether it was about ...

- electricity and natural gas pricing to Asian-based industrial customers;
 - the benefits of flexibility in the use of LNG and CNG;
 - PPA disputes in Malaysia;
 - the benefits of advanced coal technology in China;
 - the reserve capacity mechanism in Western Australia;
 - transmission regulation in Vietnam, tariff regulation in Thailand, or vesting contracts in Singapore;
 - commercial and regulatory strategies for success in Asia;
 - technology and fuel switching opportunities throughout the region;
 - coal, geothermal, solar, wind, and gas, opportunities and risks in China, Australia, the Philippines, the Mekong region, and Singapore;
 - benchmarking natural gas network tariffs and delivered electricity tariffs globally; or
 - our Piques, Peeks, Conferences, or the introduction of “TLG on China”;
- ... 2014 set a new high for TLG in terms of depth and diversity of engagements.
