

The Lantau Group welcomes JAMES DOIG

James joins us from L.E.K. Consulting in London, where for four years he advised clients on their business strategy. His experience encompasses a wide range of sectors and has helped corporate clients, private investors and government departments address issues such as business plan development, acquisition due diligence, policy development and business modelling. He holds an MA and MSci in Natural Sciences from the University of Cambridge.

Examples of Mr Doig's work

Managed a team evaluating the business case for development of a new domestic product launch by a British utility.

Developed the operational models and financial forecast for a new global undertaking for a FTSE100 industrial firm's power generation venture.

Produced a strategic modelling tool to investigate a broad range of options and identify opportunities in the Sub-Saharan region as part of the review of an African power plant opportunity for a FTSE 250 energy company.

Conducted a detailed research programme assessing opportunities for domestic consumption and export of coal as part of a review of minerals strategy for an African government.

Delivered commercial impact and valuation models across numerous strategic options / market scenarios to provide a framework for investment decisions for a major broadcaster.

Supported the evaluation of the UK's Ministry of Defence acquisition system in a widely acclaimed report that has bought about significant changes to the £235bn programme.

Due diligence of a global oil and gas off-shore services provider.
